TESTIMONIAL
HICKS & OLIVER
Dadeville, Ala.

September 12, 1917.

King Cotton Seed Company, Louisburg, N. C.

Gentlemen:

On the recommendation of the Director of the Alabama Agricultural Station, that we sell, under boll weevil conditions, at least a part of our cotton acreage in early maturing varieties, we have planted the seed you kindly supplied.

We are now convinced that it was a wise suggestion, as every cotton seed we have purchased since has been where the land was properly prepared and the crop thoroughly worked, has a heavy, full, well-filled seed.

We were particularly pleased with the seed gotten from you, in that they appeared to be selected for the best, and the seed was sound. Those purchased from jobbers had the appearance of "run out" seed, and when planted, did not grow well.

The variety of cotton has come to stay in this section.

Yours very truly,

ROW MORE CURRANT GRAPES

Panariti Variety Promises to Furnish Basis of Industry Heretofore Overlooked.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Physicians and Druggists are advising their friends to keep their systems purified and their organs in perfect working order as a protection against the return of influenza. They know that a clogged up system and a lazy liver favor colds, influenza and serious complications.

The 7,000 cuttings of a dark variety of Corinth grape, known as "Panariti," which the department of agriculture distributed last spring from its experiment vineyards and from the vineyards of co-operating growers in California, have grown in splendid fashion on the past season, reports show, and is a result much material in the way of cuttings and propagating stock of this variety will be available by the spring of 1921 for the extension of the currant industry in the United States. The Panariti is a dark currant rape introduced by the department several years ago. Previous to the introduction and distribution of this sort commercial production of currants in his country was not at all promising in spite of the fact that the United States imports annually over 80,000,000 pounds of dried grapes made from such varieties. These grapes produce the currants of commerce used by housewives in cakes, puddings, and other dishes.

The fact that a great market is already created for this product means much to the grape growers of the west, product, however meritorious, with which the public is not familiar, requires a great deal of costly advertising and educational promotion to become fairly popular with the consumer. Nothing of this sort is needed so far as currants are concerned. The development of a new branch of the grape-growing industry is of special interest to the vineyardists of the Pacific coast at this time when the industry is undergoing a radical readjustment.

GET READY FOR "FLU"

Keep Your Liver Active. Your System Purified and Free From Colds by Taking Calotabs, the Nauseas, Calotabs. Tablets that are Delightful, Safe and Sure.

Then give a thought to Jerry, the once frisky little Airedale with the wettest nose in all the world and the most beloved dog in Kansas. Jerry doesn't run around any more, nor does he find delight in rubbing up against the little tots whom he still must love.

He just sits with his little heart bursting, waiting for the return of the best pal he ever had, Paul Jeffords, whose scout uniform is laid away.

For Paul is dead. If Jerry could read, he'd find the story in the reports of the war department—particularly in the short one which says: "Corporal Paul Jeffords, One Hundred and Thirty-Seventh Infantry, killed in action in the Argonne Forest."

But Jerry doesn't know that. He's waiting, even though the papers have told that Paul, true scout that he was, went West in the glory of scout-like heroism; that he cast himself through fire to certain death, dying for duty; that General Pershing himself haloed his memory by rewarding him posthumously with the distinguished service cross.

But dogs can't read; so Jerry just sits on his hind paws and waits, sniffing hopefully day in and day out. Perhaps, up there, Paul, too, is waiting.

True friends are ever true.

SCOUTS IN VICTORY PARADE

In the great Victory parade in London of the forces that successfully carried on the war, the boy scouts were given a place of honor. As a unit in the splendid naval force, the sea scouts appeared under their own flag, on their own merits.

They had been accorded this privilege in recognition of the work done by them for the country in carrying out coast-watching duties during the war. They were the more remarkable in being the only boys' organization taking part in the parade.

In the preparation of the great parade the boy scouts were again utilized behind the scenes by the authorities.

With the troops of ten different nationalities assembled for the occasion, there was a great need of guides, orderlies, first-aiders and the other generally useful helpers. The authorities, as is now becoming their nature, turned to the boy scouts for help and did not turn in vain. Some 1,700 scouts were employed on this duty during the week, and they acquitted themselves without fear.—Adv.

BOSCHEE'S SYRUP.

A cold is probably the most common of all disorders and when neglected is apt to be most dangerous. Statistics show that more than three times as many people die from influenza last year, as were killed in the greatest war the world has ever known. It gives the patient a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectation in the morning. Made in America and used in the homes of thousands of families all over the civilized world. Old Oliver Onken Realizes He is the Captive, and Not the Victor, of his Captor.

My son-in-law, Luther Stuckey, doesn't amount to anything at all, and yet, paradoxical as it sounds, he is a howling success in his chosen specialty, related old Oliver Onken. "He sings a squealing tenor, he can second the motion all right, and will be as useful as anybody else to count on when the cholera breaks out. He might possibly do well managing a small farm. In short, he has never really accomplished anything except to work me so adeptly that he is able to keep better dressed than I can afford to, and by that means maintain a higher standing in the community than I enjoy. Just how he manages it I do not exactly understand, but somehow he keeps right on putting it over me. I cannot kill him, and he will not leave. When he broke into the family I thought I was getting a son-in-law, but now looks painfully like my son-in-law has got me."—Kansas City Star.

Clever Management of Braid in Suits

Braid and buttons have been the accustomed decorations for suits for so long a time that we take them as a matter of course and are not surprised to find them among any season's productions. Their popularity ebbs and flows; occasionally there is a season when they almost disappear and then comes a time when there is no getting away from them. They have been at the ebb for the past two seasons—sparingly but most cleverly used in ingenious ways that are surprisingly novel. Like the return of old friends after an absence, braid and bone buttons are welcome, especially when we discover them so smart and original in application.

Designers who determined to use braid evidently made up their minds to think up new ways of applying it. These are only two of several braided models that have compelled admiration for their originality and ingenuity.

The suit at the left differs only by having more buttons set in two long rows at the back, with bands of braid joining them. They form a narrow panel that is turned under in most unexpected fashion, at the bottom. It is little, unusual touches of this kind that give clothes distinction.

These are only two of several braided models that have compelled admiration for their originality and ingenuity.

The suit at the right has a few buttons and a little braid, but these are used with consummate taste. The braid appears in a lattice-work appeal on the front and back of the coat, which is a vague-fitting belted model, conservative and graceful. Buttons are set along the top of the pockets and on the narrow belt at the back. It is a suit for any clime or any season.

The suit at the left differs only by having more buttons set in two long rows at the back, with bands of braid joining them. They form a narrow panel that is turned under in most unexpected fashion, at the bottom. It is little, unusual touches of this kind that give clothes distinction.

Designers who determined to use braid evidently made up their minds to think up new ways of applying it.

These are only two of several braided models that have compelled admiration for their originality and ingenuity.

The suit at the right has a few buttons and a little braid, but these are used with consummate taste. The braid appears in a lattice-work appeal on the front and back of the coat, which is a vague-fitting belted model, conservative and graceful. Buttons are set along the top of the pockets and on the narrow belt at the back. It is a suit for any clime or any season.

SOCIAL INSTITUTION HAS AN UNUSUAL CLEANBILL OF HEALTH

Although Pernicious Rumors Would Have It Otherwise—Infirmaries at Local College Look Like Deserter Hall.

NOT ONE CASE OF MALADY AT ST. STANISLAUS COLLEGE

A Condition That Is Gratifying and Speaks Well For Those In Charge and for City.

It passes all understanding why the tendency exists for the public to circulate rumors and reports, the former more particularly, that (1) are improbable, (2) with little semblance of reason and (3) that do no good, on the contrary, injure in the extreme. Whether through malice or ignorance, the first does not justify neither does the second excuse. Surely there is no sense to justify in either case.

An instance which comes under the above remarks and to our particular notice during the week is the extremely damaging report of sickness, of epidemic in large numbers at St. Stanislaus College, of Bay St. Louis. A report devoid of fact and without any foundation whatever.

The reports have been as varied and at variance with the truth as grossly exaggerated. But two samples will suffice. One to the effect the ninety cases of influenza existed the other that over forty collegians were victims of the ailment!

The truth is there is not one case of malady—not one bed occupied at the infirmary or elsewhere on the college premises.

There is not one case of illness. Can you imagine a more remarkable, healthier condition, even in normal times, where over two hundred collegians are quartered?

A reporter of The Echo visited the college infirmary Thursday morning and found the place deserted save for the presence of the infirmary in charge and a visiting brother who is recuperating from an accident which occurred at Shreveport, La., recently.

This is what the reporter found. How widely opposite from the repeat reports about the college locally and as well as away!

The report was as current in some parts of New Orleans as in Bay St. Louis.

Such false statement is not only damaging to the ideal health conditions that exist at St. Stanislaus College—these conditions due to the exercise of absolute sanitation and practice of hygiene which is ever in mind and in hand by the management and the usual care and constant attention which every collegian individually and collectively receives.

A. Anderson, well-known in Bay St. Louis, as builder of part of the seawall in front of this city, was here from Gulfport yesterday in the interest of a proposed ferry for passengers and automobiles across the bay of Bay St. Louis.

Mr. Anderson proposes to run a ferry across at frequent intervals, as the traffic will justify, carrying eight automobiles on every trip.

He intends to appear before the Board of Supervisors Monday in order to secure the proper privilege, and intends to get a like permission from the Board of Supervisors of Harrison county. The ferry to be used, we understand, is in operation at Morgan City. It is large, powerful and a safe boat and will do the work satisfactorily. The legal field for such proposition ought to prove remunerative, and even though the big bridge is to be built across and over the bay, in the meantime the project ought to bring handsome returns to those interested. Mr. Anderson proposed to place the ferry in commission at the earliest possible moment.

ADDITIONAL CITY ECHOES.

Mr. Leo W. Seal, assistant cashier of the Hancock County Bank, left yesterday for a business trip to Jackson, to be gone a few days.

Dr. John A. Mead, of Logtownton, has been appointed county health officer for Hancock, recommended by the State Board of Health, and appointed by the Governor. Dr. Mead visited Bay St. Louis yesterday afternoon on official business, and was a welcome caller on The Echo. He succeeds Dr. Moody, of Kiln, as county health officer.

Contractor John T. McDonald and force of workmen are at work in remodeling the building of the Hancock County Bank. It is a big job, but is in capable hands. When completed the building will be a credit to growing Bay St. Louis.

Mr. C. Forstner purchased during the week the property on the beach front, near Citizen street, from Mrs. Mathilda Olivari of New Orleans, who, with her family, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Wolbrecht and children, are occupying the pace, contemplating yet improvements to the property, which will be consummated during the early spring.

COUNTY HOME DEM. AGENT SAYS HATCH CHICKENS EARLY.

Spring Is Nature's Most Favorable Growing Season—January, February, and March Best Months For Hatching.

MILLIONS OF LATE HATCHED CHICKS DIE LICE INFESTED.

Considerable Money Is Realized by the Sale of Cockerels as Broilers by Early Breeders.

Miss Sallie Cirlot, Hancock county agent, is actively urging the early hatching of poultry, and says too much stress cannot be placed on this subject. She says "Early spring is Nature's most favorable growing season. By hatching early they will have the advantage of this favorable growing season and longer growing period than those hatched during the late spring or early summer. Given the same feed, care and attention, chicks hatched during the first of March will weigh more when they are four months old than those hatched the first of May, when the rate of growth of a chick is greater during the first four weeks of the life than any other period.

"January, February and March are the best months for hatching. If you do not have several broody hens, get some from a neighbor, use an incubator, or take some eggs to a nearby hatchery. Chicks hatched early, with proper care and attention, should reach maturity and start laying in September, October and November. It is during these fall months that the hens are getting ready for the winter by molting and growing new feathers. When hens are molting, eggs are scarce. When eggs are scarce, prices are high. The solution then is to hatch early so as to have early maturing pullets that will produce eggs when hens are molting.

"Millions of late hatched chicks die each year as the result of being infested with lice, which are so prevalent in the summer. Hot weather retards the growth of chicks. Chickens hatched in the early spring are not so subject to lice as those hatched in the hot weather. Late hatched pullets are usually the ones that become infested with the rous, thereby endangering the rest of the flock.

Considerable money is realized by the sale of cockerels, the price of which is usually governed by the size when sold and the time marketed. Early hatching should be employed so as to have a marketable size cockerel early in the spring, when prices are high."
